He was very entrepreneurial and passionate about God, family and politics. He loved writing music (and even had some published and on YouTube), enjoyed painting and computers (he started his very early career as a programmer at IBM in the 50's and 60's).

“ I immediately remembered Anthony from our days in class at Central Catholic High School when my wife mentioned that his death notice was in the paper. The photograph was immediately recognizable to me even after 70 years. I had lost all track of him as we had both entered the service in the Korean war. I would have so loved to had had the opportunity to have sat and told lies to each other, and compare similar experiences. My condolences to his family and friends. Dan Dougherty
