“ My fondest memory of Merv goes back to 1990 just after he and Carol bought the house across the street. A couple of week had passed by and we hadn't met, but one day Carol knocked on the door and asked if I could look at their lawn sprinkler system and fix if possible. Well being me I said sure let me take a look and see what I can do, shortly after I am on my knee's messing with anther man pump who I knew nothing about except seeing this impressive stature of a man coming and going, anyways I quickly determined the root of the problem and no sooner than that this I mean this deep voice sounds out a Hey their young fellow(I was 29) what are you doing in my yard on my pump and I mean I felt every chill possible and as I turned towards the voice he was standing over me with this look like he was gonna explode. I tried to respond with some time to push back but he just started laughing and extended this big ole meat hook of a hand and began to squeeze the life out me of while he introduced himself(as I was grimising from his Iron clad handshake) as Gordon Combat. He helped me to my feet when I heard Carol yelling to him Merv that is Bobby our neighbor and he was nice enough to come over and take a look, Merv just nodded and said well I hope he likes Miller Lite cause we r gonna have one or two, well we drank a case I think that Friday night and that began a 26 year friendship that will never be equaled ever. I so Love that man and came to admire his wisdom from life and his dying stubbornness. Rest in Peace my Friend and no day shall pass that I won't smile because of you. P.S. we didn't fix that pump that weekend LOL
