Poem by Jeff

I didn't sign for
These new eyes
In a blinding light
A Divine Embrace
Comforted me
Beyond belief
A whole new view
Came into focus
It was there all along
In the misty haze
Behind the veil
Like you are now
Afraid to venture
Outside the lines
Maybe one day
The unseen muse
An animated mystic
By gentle strokes
Will paint you home
Accomplish what Words cannot

“ Susan Sayles - friend posted a condolence Jeff has gone home, a place that he remembered. He shocked us all when he left so fast. We feel bewildered and cheated of more time with him. It is unfair as he touched so many lives in such powerful ways we all beg that it is not true--but, sadly, it is. We must remember he is enraptured and returned to his Eden. We shall all meet again.

“ Vicki Woodyard - Friend posted a condolence Dear Susan, I represent one of hundreds of people moved by the loss of Jeff Belyea. He was friend to so many for so long, but not long enough. He was one of the good guys and one of the funny guys and one of the heart-centric guys. I could go on and on. Love, Vicki Woodyard
