“ Hi Ronnie,

So you're still doing things your own way. Do you remember when you were upset with grandma and for revenge you stuck the garden hose through the screen door and flooded the floor? My mom was so upset with you that she chased you all over the yard with broom in hand. I also recall my father (your grandfather) calling you a pendejo (stupid) when you showed him your home do-it-yourself tattoo of a strange looking spider. That beauty was right on your wrist so the whole world could admire it. However, somewhere along the road you started to mature. You graduated from high school and then you wanted to attend college and you did it your way. You paid for your education by sweeping floors, and cleaning bathrooms at the university. You graduated from college, and then decided that you wanted to serve your country. You trained in San Diego because the deep blue sea was calling you. You were assigned to the aircraft carrier Kittyhawk. You became an officer. You also flew helicopters and jumped out of them on rescue missions. By the way, you did your best to keep your silly and strange tattoo hidden and well concealed from the crew. However, your highest achievement in life was marrying your beautiful wife Mary and having two outstanding and wonderful children, Alison and Max. You love them so. Being that you did it your way, I can only say in closing..... Vaya Con Dios, my beloved nephew. Aunt Tina

“ Ronny and I grew up together as cousins; when we were growing up we spent a lot of time with our grandparents; often we would go hunting to put food on the table; I can remember our grandfather or uncle telling us to put our heads down while they fired their shot guns. through the window. I learned to love the outdoors; Ronny (John) was my best friend even though we fussed at each other, we sometimes had fist fights; by the way I am a girl I love my cousin and will always . I am truly proud of the man he became in his career and and family man. We will see each other in Heaven

“ John was my boss back with we worked together at Honor Technologies. I had a great deal of respect for him as a boss and even more so after learning he has served in the Navy as a helicopter pilot. He was so much fun to work with. I even to this day use some of his hilarious quotes that he used around the office with the QA team we worked on together. I will remember him fondly and he will surely be missed. Rest in peace John. God bless!
