Dr Glennon changed my life. Where I am now, a professional writer, is because of her passion for the written word, for story. I came to her from what I could call a pretty Fd up abusive childhood and she was the savior who showed me I could dance with the words across the page. And, thanks to her, Carlos Castanada is a best friend in my life, always there to advise when the path forward gets a bit too twisty. It is rare to come across another so passionate for Life and so willing to give their own time and energy to help another live it with a smile. I am forever grateful to her. Peace for her new Adventure. - AB

“ Lynda Glennon was one of the best, if not challenging, professors (of mine) at Rollins. I remember, vividly, Prof. Glennon refusing to accept any of my papers unless they were submitted on a computer. I had to redo many papers because I would hit the wrong button and deleted everything. When she told me of this requirement, I was, extremely, colorful in my response. Years later I went to her office at Rollins to let her know that I was teaching web courses at UCF. I thought of her many times since leaving Rollins. My BA was in Anthropology and Sociology with a minor in Womens' Studies.
