“ Sweet Patrick Jones:

I see him as a youngster romping around with Seth in their front yards, gathering Easter eggs with Sarah, Natashia, and Mike, dancing in his mother's kitchen ["You go, Patrick!" says Pat], playing video games with Mike, and I see him the day he and Natashia were waiting in their driveway for their dad, Nate, to drive home their new, Ford with Eddie Baur trim. They were very excited and happy and could not wait to take their first ride in it. Children live authentically.

Patrick was brought up "old school" which meant treating people right, respecting elders, telling the truth, and following in the path of God. I recall saying something to my children about not lying and seeing Patrick nodding his head yes. He piped up with, "And you know why?" "Why?" I asked. "Because my mother says you look like a fool when you lie!" he answered. I could not have answered that why any better than little Patrick had. Patrick, also, was brought up greatly loved in a strong, close family.

*It didn't matter that the extended family was far in distance. It was close. Patrick and Natashia also were brought up in a close church community, their church family. Patrick had family, neighborhood, community, and faith. He valued his faith. He valued his connections. He valued people. I know he valued me and my children, and we valued him. We Miss Patrick, and now his absence for us, for me, Mike, and Sarah is heavy with sadness because we know we no longer have the chance to see him again in this life. We send deep, heart-felt sympathy, tears (many tears), and prayers to Nate, Natashia, the children, all Patrick's family and friends.

“ Pat was such a great friend. He was so close to my late husband. That's how I met Pat thru my husband. I still can't believe Pat is gone. I just talked to him a couple weeks ago and then he messaged me and I missed it and didn't reply and I'm hurting so bad now cause of that. I know he is up there with all of our people we have lost. They were such close friends but at least they are together again. One day we will all be together again. I love you Pat and will see you again one day. You will always be in my heart.
