“ My mother was such a big part of my life. I want her to be remembered as a woman not afraid to speak her mind. She has taught me to stand up for what I believe in, even if that means I'm standing alone. She was so loyal, always had my back, even if I was wrong. She was my first phone call when I had good news, even bad news. Things don't feel right with her gone. It seems surreal. I have never felt this kind of pain, longing to see my mother just one more time, one more hug. She lived for her 5 grandsons. She would always say, "I never knew this type of love existed." I know she's with me and watching over me. I will never be finished getting her justice for the way she passed. My heart is completely broken

I believe your mother was a big part of everyone's life at one point or another for all of us who were growing up there in brightwood. She may have had her own things that she was dealing with at the time but she always allowed us to come over and hang out in her home and spend time with you and your sister and we knew that we were going to have a safe place to be. She never chased us away. she was always loving and kind and I miss her with all my heart. Take things one day at a time Dayna, everyone always says that time heals all wounds but I don't believe that's completely true, instead, the scar just gets lighter in appearance. We learn to get by one day at a time. Eventually the sadness will turn into happiness as we always remember the good times that we spent with her. Please give your sister a great big hug for me since I'm too far away to hug the both of you.
