“ Ron used to always call me to check in how i was doing. I'll miss that. We grew up on simple times and laughed at simple things. He taught me how to appreciate the simple things in life. I wish i had more to say but I don't right now. I just miss my friend slash brother. See you in the multi verse

“ It’s hard to choose one memory I have of Ron because there are just so many good ones. He was so kind and supportive, and he was an amazing example of what a truly good human should be. He never let me feel alone in my struggles or my accomplishments. He cheered me on through them and it meant so much to me to have a friend that would give as well as take. We took turns listening to each other and catching up on our lives, and every time we talked I swear he had more new things going for him than the time before. He truly made his own happiness and loved life, even when it was hard on him. I’ve never met anyone with such enthusiasm for life and loving his friends. I never had to guess if he cared about me because he made sure I always knew. He will be missed so very much. Love you Ron. Thoughts and love to his family and friends.

“ I met Ron as a teenager in Damascus, MD. Even in our early years, it was obvious that he was SO unique in all the best ways. Ron had a mind that was truly amazing and a personality to match. He was constantly looking for his next project. I remember him always tinkering in the garage at his parents’ house and running to the hobby store. Ron was always helping others. He was younger than his brother Roson and me but I can recall several times when we asked for his expertise and assistance in little projects. It seemed like Ron would always have the answer or work until he found one.

From what I have read so far around the internet, it seems I am not alone in my opinion of Ron Ray. He was a brilliant human with unrelenting compassion for all of those he cared about. I thank him for the experience I had with him. I will always remember his heart of gold and his big smile and goofy laugh. I love you Ron!
