She met the love of her life, Tommy, at a dance held at Roseland Ballroom, New York City. They married in 1961 and lived in Brooklyn. Their son, Walter, was born in 1962, and the family moved to Levittown, New York before the arrival of daughter, Linda, in 1964. Rose and Tommy raised the family in Levittown, where Rose dedicated her life to her family as a homemaker, assuring that her children were involved in many aspects of small town life, including Little League, dance lessons, scouting and St. Bernard's Catholic Church. She was a talented seamstress and cook, blending her Latin heritage and her adopted Italian heritage of her husband's family, into amazing cuisine.
