“ Uncle Thao was the first person who taught me how to drive when I turned 16. It was when he still had the sky blue Ford (i think?). After a couple of practices on straight road and hitting a few speed bumps, I think i might have broken his car's muffler (not sure, because he didn't tell me, else I would have been very scared at the time).

I remember Uncle Thao as a very generous person, always do things for family and friends without expecting anything in return. He was fun to be around because he made teasing jokes which make people laugh, although I didn't really laugh when I was a teenager. My aunt Judy was very lucky to be married to him and have three loving children together.

*Sincerely,
Chau Hanh*
