“ I worked with Vern for several years. During that time we formed a great friendship and I always treasured our lunches together after he moved to Peachtree city. He loved Helen and both of his children very much and would much time when we got together telling me so and also how proud he was of their accomplishments and successes. Then we would laugh about some of our work experiences and then talk stocks and investments finish with politics. Once we had solved all of the world's problems, we would finish lunch ,find a few last things to laugh about and then I would drive him home and we would schedule our next lunch and I would head home. It was about a 3.5 hour trip to have that lunch with my friend and I knew that it was worth every minute of it. Bruce Toups
