“ Whenever I reflect on my teenage years, Vic is always there. Vic was my friend, more so than any others in our group. The others left one by one until it was just Vic and me. We were inseparable. I have many fond memories of Vic but some of the best involved the rest of the Palermo family. I remember Mickey especially. We were classmates in school. I remember a few times she would sit behind me in class and brush my considerably long hair. She also taught me a lifelong lesson in humility...that I was not all I assumed I was. Thanks Mickey! I remember that Tony always smiled when she saw me. But she seemed to always be smiling. Tony is the one who cut my long hair the day before Vic and I entered the Marine Corps together. Tony; I gave that ponytail to my mother and she still has it. Marie was the grown up of the group. She always seemed so mature, classy, and intelligent. I thought she was the perfect standard that any man should seek.

Other memories include Mr. and Mrs. Palermo. Mrs. Palermo was so generous inviting me to dinner several times. I was especially impressed that pasta did not come from a box and that sauce did not come from a jar. Thanks everyone for letting me sit at your table. Mr. Palermo never said much to me but I can still remember him sitting in his chair looking like the ultimate authority figure. He was always kind to me and would at least say hello. Of course, I remember Sam too. I did not know him very well except that he was the older brother. He was always cordial with me and I was devastated when he passed away.

I soon went away as well. I got married, moved out west, and concentrated on the new people in my life. Eventually, I found my way back to Florida. Vic, I now wish that I had made an effort to reach out to you. We should have been lifelong friends. I would have come to know your nieces and nephews and you would have known my wife and children. Vic, I am sorry it was not that way. I miss you and I will never forget you.

Steve

Most of life's regrets are not for things we have done. We mostly regret things that were not done.

Steve, Thank you for sharing those early memories with us and have my mom and aunts and uncles were back then.

I know growing up, we always seemed to have an extra person or 2 when we either had our Sunday family dinner at my grandparents or a holiday dinner.... seems that the more the merrier!!!
